

Prof. Adler went for Him, Too, and All Hands Except Mr. Choate jumped on the bandwagon. The Business Principles of the Fast Food Diner—Klein Got the Stivest

Ever since the Goo Goo dinner two nights after election, when the half-prorated ticket was authorized and every part of the corpse except the head, Mr. C. C. Choate, with there, there have been stories. H. Choate had been called the Hon. Joseph H. Choate had been called down by the Right Rev. Bishop Potter, and the dinner had been going around whistling to each other. "Did you hear about it?" and then going into a corner and telling stories to each other. It's been a long time since the dinner, and although this Goo Goo Dinner has turned out to be an event, in spite of the fact that the story of it has never been told in its en-

Now it happened that two days before the election he met Mr. John Jay Chapman. Mr. Chapman was one of the best of the old-fashioned champions of the cause, a clear thinker, a clear speaker, a clear writer, and all that. He and Mr. Cozzie foisted each other about the sides of the prospective Goo vote, and then Mr. Chapman asked Mr. Choute if he would accept an invitation to dine with a selected lot of Goo Gooes two nights after the election. Mr. Choute said the equivalent of "You bet."

Mr. Chapman explained that he wanted to be invited to lunch and dinner by the Goo Gooes, and that the understanding Mr. Cozzie accepted the invitation and Mr. Chapman went around and got up the list of names.

He was invited, and about sixty Goo Gooes who had been active in the campaign, as well as Bishop Potter, came to the dinner. Mr. Choute didn't want to, of course, to say that the dinner was got up for the express purpose of having fun. But he was a very good fellow, and he had been particularly faithful as campaign manager and had given his time night and day, and was a very good fellow, and he was very kind to him. To Bishop Potter was de-

Emerson had been so unimpressed as he got up, dashed his chair back, and announced that he was glad he had not been there. He said that he was glad to hear that the thought that he was pretty nearly "onto" the Goo Goo intellectual movement was not a "new" idea. He said, "What's all this talk about? I wanted to know. He didn't understand. He hadn't heard of it. He didn't know what it was, was, though he knew where he was. He didn't think that they knew what they had been doing. He didn't know what he was doing, but he realized that the ways of the Goo Goos were full of mystery; that they were mysterious, but not in the way that Emerson was. He was carrying them out; their plans were mystical, and their ideals were mystical. He didn't know what he was doing, but he wasn't mystical, he allowed, was there and in. He thought he could clearly see that. He didn't know what he was doing, but he was. He was magnificent, and he was applauded every day. Occasionally he spoke of the Goo Goo movement, and he was applauded. The Committee of Fifty. The speakers who presented the Fifth. The speakers who presented the Fifth. The speakers who presented the Fifth."

The Chancellor said last night: "It was fully understood both before and after my nomination that I would not resign my present office for the reason that it would be impossible to do so without prejudice to the interest of authors, and hence would be a disregard of my duty. I am not a resigning Senator. I have been elected to the Senate and I intend to serve. It is incorrect," reported the Times, "to say that he said that before the campaign was fairly started I called upon him and voluntarily offered to resign the Chancellorship and gave actively into the canvass, but that he persuaded me not to do so. He has never said that he has never called upon Senator Smith and have never suggested that I would resign."

GLEASON'S BATTLE AXE IN COURT

Hirsch Seeks to Have the Ballots for Supreme Court Justice Thrown Out.

JAMAICA, L. I., Nov. 15.—An attempt will be made in the Queens county Supreme Court tomorrow to dismember Patrick Jerome Gleason's ticket, which received about 3,000 votes at the recent election. His ticket is headed with the battle axe. Just previous to election his adversary made efforts to have the battle axe chopped off the head of the ticket. Gleason declared that Gleason was not entitled to a separate emblem. Justice Cullen, however, decided that the battle axe ticket was entitled to a place on the official ballot, and under this emblem the faithful supporters of the ticket were strong enough according to the original returns filed with the county clerk to elect Gleason, Mayor of Jamaica, and William H. Hirsch, county clerk. City Clerk, who made the canvass in that city

It is said that a report of the Mayor's Committee on the subject of the proposed new fast train to Washington and Philadelphia, prepared by Charles De Forest Burns, secretary of the Park Board. Other places with good salaries are available in the Park Department, and still other places will be available when the new Departments of Correction and Charities are organized, after the Mayor's return from Atlanta, or about Dec. 10.

There are other good places all ready to go. Wendt, salary $3,000. Another is that of Assessor Tax Commissioner, salary $3,700. The term of office of an Assessor is indefinite. That the salary of a Commissioner of the Department of Public Works is held was asserted by several strong supporters of the bill, including Mayor H. A. Haverly, Edward Cahill, and Henry A. Jamieson. There are a lot of minor places available in the Public Works Department.

The ex-President glorified Frenchybrutery, and, incidentally, gave a Rap to the highest Criticism in connection with the new Ultra Big Game of the French.

The Hon. Benjamin Harrison presided in the night at what was probably one of the largest meetings in the interest of foreign missions which have ever been held in New York City. It was held in Carnegie Hall, and was the concluding meeting of a week of work that has been done by the Presbyterian churches for the advancement of the foreign mission cause.

At 7 o'clock Fifty-seventh street in front of the music hall was choked with people. There were enough in the crowd to fill the hall almost completely when it was opened fifteen minutes later. The police, on account of the fact that the ex-President was to preside, had expected an even larger crowd, and there were 1000 patrolmen which were unoccupied in the front of the platform. He dropped his overcoat and hat, and stepped forward to the Misses Annie and George Park, cornetists in the band. Then he turned to Mr. Rev. John H. Davies, Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian Church, arose to introduce the ex-President. He said:

"The question will be asked why we are called together to-night. There are two worlds in the presence of the foremost missionary society of the world. One is ability, on the other side is opportunity, and when these two come together they constitute responsibility. We are called on here to strike the keystone of advance in the great work for which we are responsible, and for which we cannot shirk the responsibility. This great assemblage is to consider this question."

He then turned to the duties of the Christian, and then said:

"It is my pleasure to introduce as the speaker to-night, Mr. J. H. Davies, Chairman of the

The audience sang a missionary hymn, and then Joseph F. Forbes, Moderator of the Presbytery of New York, pronounced the benediction. When the meeting was over the ex-President had to shake hands with the most of the crowd on the platform.

Harrison Avoids Political Tangles.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 15.—Gen. Harrison announced just before he started for New York yesterday that he will probably not get back in time to attend the conference of Indiana Republicans here on next Wednesday. One of his friends said that if the General should stay here and attend the conference it would be said that he was meeting with Indiana Republicans for the purpose of furthering his candidacy for the Presidency.

It is the twenty-fourth anniversary of the club's organization. Most of the hundred members present were students of the University of Wisconsin, and many guests came to see the new club house and to enjoy an entertainment in the gallery into which Rogers' studio has been converted.

The new home of the club is to have a distinction in the decoration of the main hall, where there is a frieze of thirty mahogany panels, each the work of one of the leading artists of the past century. The frieze is made up of all the panels, but some of the panels are lost to some extent of the commendation of the assembled painters.

There is nothing in the city like this panel and when it is completed it will be shown with pride. Robert Minor has an after-sunset scene

LONG ISLAND BRIDGE WINS.

The right of the New York and Long Island Bridge Company to condemn lands for its approaches on this side of the East River was upheld yesterday by the General Term of the Supreme Court. Justice Van Brunt said that the company's right to condemn was not affected by the fact that the property was not in the hands of the state.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S BANK SCANDAL
Directors Held for Trial in $26,000 Matter
 Each.

St. John's, Nov. 15. The directors of the defunct Union Bank, including Sir Robert Thorburn, ex-Premier of the colony; the Hon. Augustus Harvey, until recently a member of the Whitehay Executive and leader in the Government upper House; William Baines Griev, a leading merchant, and William Donnelly, ex-Receiver-General, were committed to trial for trial before the Supreme Court on the charge of conspiracy and mismanagement of the bank's affairs. Judge Connor, the investigating magistrate, stated that a perfect principle had been established against all doubt, and that it was his duty to commit them. Each of the directors had received a salary of $1,000 a year, and in the sum of $26,000 for the defendant.

The cases are likely to be tried at a Special Assizes, which will be held in the next few days, although the opinion in certain quarters is that the cases will be tried at the Assizes.

Five School Commissioners to Be Reappointed.

It was said yesterday that there is no doubt of the reappointment of Mayor Strong and Wednesday night of the five members of the Board of Education whose terms expire and who were originally appointed by him. The two who were not appointed by Mayor Strong are Col. Joseph A. Taylor and John J. Anderson. Col. Taylor is a resident of the Twenty-third ward and it was said that should he be succeeded his place would be taken by John J. Anderson, a lawyer who resides at Bedford Park.

Treasury Departments—The Arrest of the Alleged Filibuster at Charleston

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The Spanish minister, Señor Dupuy de Lôme, has called the attention of the State Department to the rumor that the American steamer Laurada, which reached Charleston to-day, had violated the neutrality laws of the United States in bringing an armed force on Cuban soil to support the insurgents there. Secretary Olney has transmitted Señor de Lôme's protest to the Treasury Department, and Secretary Taft to-day telegraphed collectors of Customs at the Atlantic coast to look out for the Laurada.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—The Spanish authorities are proceeding with great earnestness against the Captain and owners of the steamer Lauroda, which, they allege, carried the last filibustering expedition under Céspedes to Cuba. The Spanish Consul-General at Philadelphia, Señor Congosto, has been collecting evidence against the steamer. His report to the Federal authorities states that the vessel was at Philadelphia on Oct. 21, for Kingston, Jamaica, where off Sandy Hook she took aboard Céspedes and his associates, and sailed for Cuba, the son of a chief of the insurgent forces in Cuba. Twenty years ago, and several of his followers, were killed in the battle of San Juan. The Céspedes expedition was thorough, and the steamer was loaded with arms, and among them three boats which were to be used in landing from the ship. During the voyage the vessel was fired upon by the United States gunboats, but the Spanish Consul-General alleges, and with no concealment, the motives of the expedition were the promotion of their purposes. The vessel was searched by the United States gunboats, and the arms and munitions were recovered.

rest of Capt. Samuel Hughes of the American steamer Laurada invests her with renewed interest. The captain, who is a native of New York, revealed the fact that her sole owner is William W. Kerr of Philadelphia, which is her home port. On Nov. 2 the Laurada was entered twice as from Kingston, Montego Bay, St. Ann's Bay, Jamaica, B. W. I. Her cargo consisted largely of fruit, and she was assigned to the service of W. & C. Co. of this city, the buyers of the passengers. All of her papers on her trip to Kingston were in order, and the immigration authorities turned her over to the customs on her October trip to the south. It is said that her very hasty departure from the port of Kingston was due to her being libelled on a complaint made by the Spanish government. It is also said that the Laurada was held in port for not escaping the penalties to which her Captain is liable. When her register was surrendered to the customs, she was released.

A Customs House official said last night that the Laurada's present papers limit her to a trade in the West Indies and the United States. It is said that the warrant for the arrest of the captain is still in force.

An Expedition of 500 or More Said to Have Sailed with Arms and Dynamite.

JACKSONVILLE, Nov. 15.—A cablegram from the Times-Union for Key West says:

"The Times-Union correspondent is reliably informed that an expedition consisting of 1,200 to 1,500 and 600 men, well equipped, left Jacksonville on Monday for Cuba. It is stated that besides plenty of arms, cartridges, and shot, they carried considerable dynamite.

"On Saturday midnight flash lights were seen by parties on the south beach in the direction of the reef, which caused it to be reported in the city that some vessel in distress was signalling for assistance. Several pilot boats were sent out, but no vessel was sighted, nor, but of daylight, on Sunday they

The top board of the fence disappeared yesterday, and the lower board was attacked to it. One man wanted to buy the post on which Schlatter now rested his hand, and the post was sold for $100 to another. Handkerchiefs were laid on the post in a reverential manner by some, and the crowd never tired of looking at the place where Schlatter's broad foot had been pinned. The unfortunate who arrived on foot to attend the wedding was almost choked by tears. Most of them shed tears, and started for home on the next train. Those who remained holding hands and feet were to several hundred packages and many left daily. This mail is dumped upon the firemen, who are required to deliver it to the claimant matter. locked up at Police Headquarters. The following story was told:

While doing time on Blackwell's Island about a year ago, I met David Hederson, a prisoner. Their terms were to expire at the same time, and they formed a partnership as it were, in burglary. They lived in Twenty-fourth street after they got out on their parole. One night they quarrelled. The morning Konrad was missing, the police arrested for stealing their joint spoils. Hederson was released on parole by the Police Court and discharged, Hederson refused to appear.

After this Hederson was arrested for the Washington, D. C., police, and was taken to jail in Washington for five years for robbery.

After Konrad's discharge he tried to track jewelry taken from him when he was arrested, but he was unable to find the owners and refused to surrender it. Since then he has been trying to find owners for the jewelry.

Clark grasped his heavy whip and jumped over the fence. He saw the two men and he saw the whip come down on the head of the nearest man with such force as to break the whip and fell the man. Clark then turned and struck the second man a swinging left-hander under the jaw, breaking his hold on the horse and sending him rearing. Clark then ran to the carriage and whipped up his horse. Clark's carriage ran into the woods.
